NOTES

The Conservatoire de Paris has been among the world's most respected schools for music performance since the 18th century. Its famous Concours, public competitive exams, often include newly-composed works. The first half of this recital features four woodwind competition pieces from 1916, 100 years ago. (Two were repeats, having been used in previous years.) The Fauré Fantaisie has become a staple of the woodwind repertoire, and the Büsser and Lefebvre pieces to a lesser extent, but the Puget Solo is little-known, unrecorded, and out of print.

Classically-trained flutist Greg Pattillo is known best for his “beatboxing flutist” videos that have been viewed millions of times on YouTube. Pattillo composed Three Beats for beatbox flute for a 2011 competition sponsored by the National Flute Association.

Italian composer Roberto Molinelli wrote Four Pictures from New York in 2001, “inspired by the Big Apple, as it seems to the eyes of a European in love with America and its music and culture.” The piece is unusual because it calls upon the soloist to play three members of the saxophone family.
